Dear [redacted]:

STAT

Thank you for your letter of 3 October offering the services of yourself and [redacted] to this Agency.

The background information which you included in your letter is most interesting, and is being made a matter of record. Should developments here provide an opportunity to adequately utilize your experience and that of [redacted], you may be sure that we will contact you again for discussion of possibilities.

STAT

The interest which prompted your kind offer is appreciated.

Sincerely,

Dear

STAT

As I told you in the course of our conversation in my [redacted] I wanted an opportunity to review the current personnel requirements of this Agency before replying to your offer of service. I have now had an opportunity to consider these requirements and to discuss the available opportunities with some of the key men in the Agency. At the present time, there is no opening here commensurate with your abilities and experience. It is a mistake, I think, to attempt to create a job just because a man has ability and background when, in fact, no job exists. In view of your present position and the other opportunities for service in Government which are open to you, I am writing at the earliest possible moment to tell you of the situation here so that you will not postpone action in some other direction while waiting for a reply from me.

I am most grateful for your expression of interest in the Central Intelligence Agency and I hope you will be successful in finding just the opportunity for Government service that you want in this emergency.

Very sincerely,

51- dip via ER 10/4

Dear Mr. [redacted]:

I am sorry I missed your call the afternoon of 8 August 1950, since I had attempted to contact you here at the office of the New York Times before you returned to New York.

STAT

[redacted] has informed me that we do not have any suitable positions open now for individuals with your particular qualifications. However, should such a position arise in the future, you will, of course, be contacted. It is regretted that a more favorable answer cannot be given you at this time.

Admiral Hillenkoetter has been apprised of the contents of this letter.

Sincerely,
